DEBTORS IN COURT— SUING COLLECTORS

• Using legal tactics pioneered by a Minneapolis attorney, debtors are striking back.

By CHRIS SERRES • cserres@startribune.com

Minneapolis attorney Pete Barry points expectantly at the video screen, drawing the attention of the 16 attorneys in the hotel conference room who've come to learn his trade secrets.

On the screen, a debt collector with spiky hair is squirming, his eyes darting back and forth as Barry barrages him with questions. "You see!" Barry yells triumphantly. "He's lying. Collectors often lie. If it's between me and him in front of a jury, I'll win every day."

Hounded by collection firms that buy unpaid debts and relentlessly pursue debtors through court judgments, many of Barry's clients have turned to him for relief from what they contend is nothing short of harassment.

Yet the legal movement Barry helped create — by training hundreds of lawyers at grueling, 30-hour boot camps that cost $2,500 per head — has begun to look more and more like the collections industry he despises.

Federal lawsuits by debtors against collectors have soared sevenfold over the past decade, in a mirror image of the huge jump in collections judgments that Barry and others accuse debt collectors of churning out mill-style without regard to accuracy.

An Intensive Litigation Primer On Suing Debt Collectors
Under The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act

A Great Legal Learning Experience

Simple. Concise. Complete. The FDCPA Boot Camp is an intensive, group legal training experience designed to help new and experienced lawyers hone their litigation skills in suing debt collectors. The boot camp is hundreds of critical topics, strategies, and tactics presented in a lively, systematic way to help launch your new FDCPA practice, or make your existing consumer practice shine. The boot camp is centered on two simple concepts: While not every collection account is destined to become an FDCPA claim; every FDCPA claim is destined to become a better FDCPA claim. That's called Barry's Law and its Corollary. These two principles are infused in my FDCPA practice and I hope to have the chance to show you how.

The boot camp experience looks at things from a lawyering perspective over nearly 25 years, evaluating and litigating thousands of FDCPA cases. The materials and content are drawn from dozens of previous boot camps, consumer law classes, and CLEs. I use a combination of real-life video, audio, lecture, and practical tips to help you dive into the deep end of FDCPA.

There is nothing like the FDCPA Boot Camp anywhere else in the United States. I want your experience to be the best it can possibly be and I want you to enjoy your experience. This information guide is intended to cover most questions you might have about the boot camp, but I encourage you to drop me an email if you have questions that aren't covered here. I am genuinely excited to spend two days with you focused on making things right for consumers—by righting the wrongs of debt collectors.

In a few days, you get more practical knowledge about the FDCPA than you could glean from a decade of trial and error in your own practice. # More Boot Camper Comments

"I came to the June 2010 Minneapolis Boot Camp to update my knowledge of FDCPA litigation and to learn how to improve recovery from the really abusive debt collectors. Practicing in Alaska, where the consumer bar is small and distances great, I seldom have the opportunity to benefit from interaction with other practitioners in the consumer law field, much less benefit from spending a weekend learning from a master.

I found the boot camp to be everything I hoped for and more. Not only did Pete provide a breakdown of how to set a realistic valuation on FDCPA cases but we also learned the pitfalls that lie in wait for the unwary.

I received immediate benefit from Pete's explanation of aggressively using depositions to pin down the debt collectors and expose their shoddy practices. Pete's thumb-drive toolkit-- with its sample notices of deposition for a corporate reps and FDCPA-specific deposition questions-- saved me days of work as I prepared to depose a Colorado debt collector this fall.

On the eve of starting an extensive round of depositions that opposing counsel recognized were not going to go well for his client, we reached a settlement that made my clients happy and compensated me well for my time. I credit the impressive deposition notice and Pete's analysis of proving emotional distress damages with getting a struggling young military family the recovery they deserved. Hope to see you in Alaska one of these days. I'm on the lookout for a case that would require your talents."

Paul H. Bratton, Jr., Consumer Lawyer, Talkeetna, Alaska
phbratton@gci.net

"Pete, thank you for an incredible experience. I can't believe the amount of stamina you exhibited during the 2.5 days. I also wholeheartedly thank you for the flash drive full of the materials you use everyday in your practice. That's going to save me more time and money in the first few hours of FDCPA practice than the cost of the boot camp."

"After more than 25 years as a bankruptcy attorney, Pete's boot camp gave me a brand new perspective on my cases, and new avenues through which to provide meaningful help to my

"I attended Pete's Boot Camp 3 years ago because I was just starting to handle FDCPA cases. After that Boot Camp I had the confidence to file and settle cases. However, I attended again this year because I now want to make more money on my FDCPA cases. I am very confident that the information I received from this Boot Camp will make me more money. Thank you for providing us with this opportunity."

"Pete's Boot Camp is unquestionably the best investment I have made in my FDCPA practice."

clients. I would recommend this experience to any attorney seeking to broaden a consumer practice."

"Hands down the best preparation for starting, building and sustaining a law practice using the FDCPA as your foundation."

"I defy you to find another CLE course that (1) leaves you with all of the forms and tools needed to bring your first action or improve your next case, (2) is taught by a national leader in the field, and (3) keeps you motivated and inspired -- even during 12 hour sessions. Money well spent."
